LOT 1781: Pullman Car Works • January 1891 (5 Cars)

The "Weeping Willow" pattern which appears on the berth fronts of the car ARONA (Plan 784) shows a lighter design in the white lacquer which resembles tooled leather. This is a technique used by Mann in the early 1880s. This car has a new fresh and cheerful appearance. The mirror on the drawing room door gives the impression that the car is much longer, but a careful look reveals the reflection of the tripod and camera in the aisle. Smithsonian Institution Photograph P2472.
